Eli Perkins on judges

I remember one fellow we had as judge - of course he wasn't a real judge - just a sort ov or high fence ruler, er J. P. Yet see to an he had 'em try scraps between fellers
at was quarlin'
er bout a quarter or
a half dollar one ov em had tent the other
an the other didn't pay up. Yet see? Well we called him judge an his master &c, just to tickle his vanity an maybe he hadn't a big streak of that same commodity -

He got so set on himself that he wanted everybody lets think as he did an if any one did not agree with him, he got mad right off an' wouldn't play. He got all the Carvers in the town
afraid ov him an'
they daren't say their souls was their own
for fear he'd give em the Cross Cut when they had a case before him.
He was very religious but was great for keepin'
the Sabbath holy, etc but the time he wud ketched down some land work or other on Sunday an'
datin' a dokymenit

a day ahead er
behind ter make it
legal. &c

Yeh could n't fool him on a case neither, no matter how convicin' any common runt oo a judge might think your evidence was. He'd admit youd no evidence. He'd just take a look at the paper an' the depth, an' size an' both up in a went's space, an' he'd decide then an' there how that case had to be decided. &c

If he didn't like yeh he wouldn't care in time in dactin' civil tek ye. "Dow you want any thing?" he'd ask if yeh went visit his chambers.

"Yes. If there's anything join?"

Ye'd answer,

"Well, There's nothin' goin'" he'd say, judicial & final, an' then bid him leh the other fellow an' say, in a grand an' annihilatin' voice! "If ye'll come intel my offis, I'll tell ye the rest ov' that!" An' he'd look at yeh as if he'd like leh eat yeh if the meal wouldn't disagree with him!

With the name and addresses to the first several pages of Mrs. Roy B. Parnell (Margaret Rank Parnell), who per Ontario marriage records was born ca. 1891 and married to Roy B. Parnell, a telephone lineman, in Lincoln, Ontario on September 6, 1909; she appears again as a widow marrying John Kirkwood in December, 1916. The spotty but interesting miscellany notebook of a Canadian woman who collects a few extracts of reading ("Eli Perkins on Judges"), occasional notes on wages received working (as at a canning factory), records of the occasional boarder, a 3-page list of books in her library (Sherlock Holmes included), some household inventories, notes on sales of jewelry (apparently in partnership with her sister-in-law, Daisy Parnell), an intriguing series of notes that Daisy "went to Hospital on Nov. 30th 1908 at 6:30 P.M. on Mayor Campbell's order" [almost certainly John Samuel Campbell, 1860-1950], followed by the birth of Daisy's baby on December 11 and her release from the hospital on Jan. 4, 1909; a note in ink autograph below that records the birth of Daisy's second child, Thelma Gertrude Parnell, May 8, 1910 in "St. Kitts."
